

Proclaiming Evidence for Truth

THIS WEEK'S CREATION MOMENT

Fish Learn in Schools, Too!

Your hands have made me and fashioned me; give me understanding, that I may learn Your commandments." - Psalm 119:7

Today, we're going to a school of fish to learn about the wisdom that God built into some 20,000 different species of fish.

First of all, fish don't learn how to school; they know how to school instinctively at birth. Schooling has advantages for fish, and some schools can have over a million fish in them! You see, schools offer a lot of protection from predators.

Did you ever wonder why, when a school of fish is attacked or simply startled, the fish don't run into each other—but radiate away from the threat like exploding fireworks? Oh yes, they can all see each other; they can tell where the fish next to them are going. But schooling fish also have special organs, called lateral lines, running along the length of their bodies just under the skin. These organs are filled with sensitive hairs, which sense the movement of water around the fish, so that each fish has a better sense of the speed and direction of its neighbor from subtle movements in the water.

It is clear that the advantages of schooling, plus the special organs that schooling fish have, are not the products of genetic accidents and chance. They are testimony to a Creator Who cares for all the creatures He has made. And if He so cares for fish, how much more does He seek you and desire a relationship with you through His Son, Jesus Christ!
